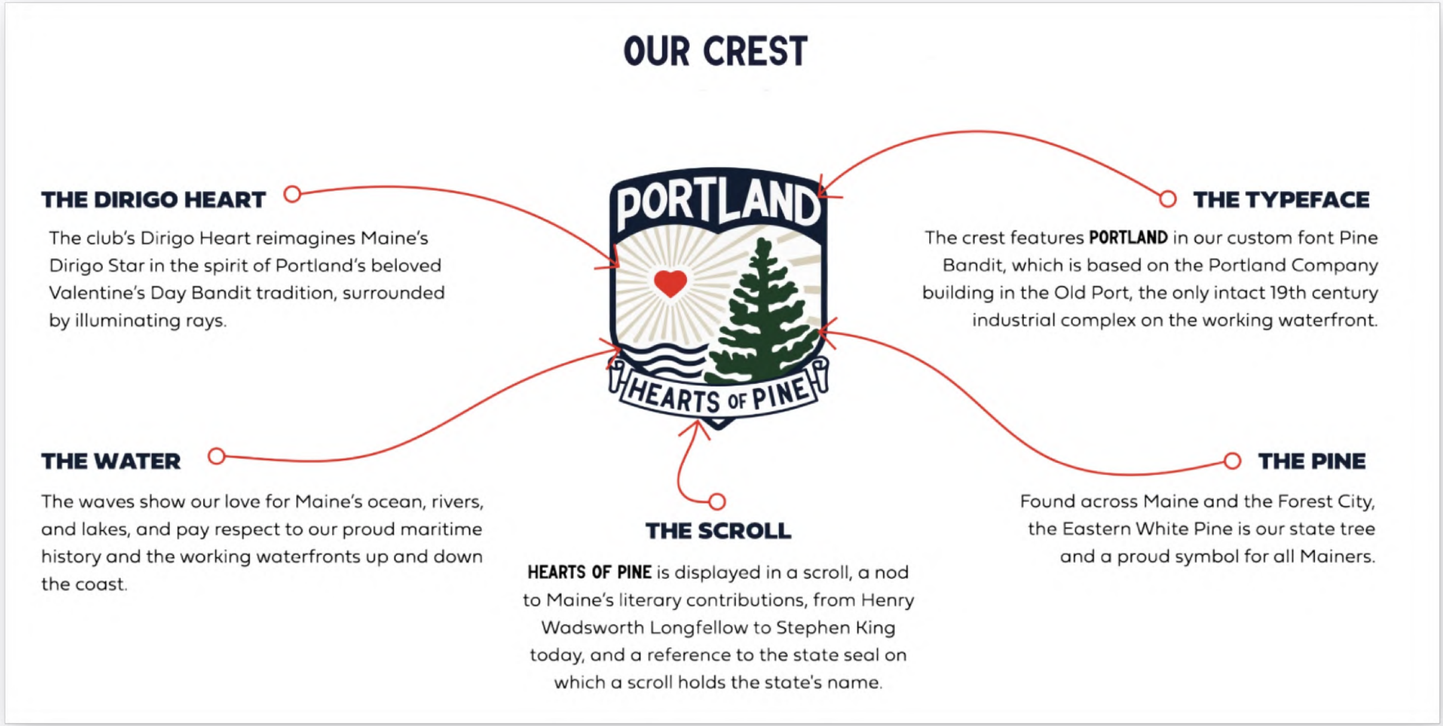
CLUB HISTORY

VS



Entering the USL in 2025, Portland Hearts of Pine quickly established one of the most distinctive brands in American lower-division soccer—one rooted deeply in Maine's identity. Matchdays at Fitzpatrick Stadium reflect that ethos, blending authentic supporter culture with a strong sense of place through local music, food, and community partnerships. Rather than simply placing a team in Maine, Hearts of Pine set out to build a club that feels like Maine—distinct, grounded, and community-driven.

The Soccer for Good mission is central to Hearts of Pine. By engaging Mainers and creating spaces for community-building, Hearts believe that soccer can be a medium for sustainable social impact in Maine.

VS

IN THE NEWS

Context:

Hearts followed up a 3-3 thriller with Greenville Triumph with a 1-1 friendly draw against MLS NextPro side Connecticut United. After going down a goal early, Tyler Huck's second-half equalizer was the bright spot on the evening. Portland sit 11th in the League One table with 21 points, within striking distance of the playoff places with 14 games still to play.

Saturday brings Corpus Christi to Fitzpatrick. If Hearts hope to make a push for the playoffs, the time is now to get things rolling. The team knows that they can beat any team at home, and there's no doubt Fort Fitzy will be rocking until the very last minute of the season.

Hearts Off the Field:

Hearts of Pine have announced plans to transform Cassidy Point, a long-fenced-off coal storage site on Portland's Western Waterfront, into a permanent soccer-specific stadium of 9,000–11,000 seats for both the men's and women's teams. This is about building something lasting for the city of Portland — a waterfront destination that belongs to everyone, that people can walk, bike, and bus to, and that reflects the pride and spirit of Maine. With the intent of opening in 2029, Cassidy Point will be brimming with that same energy that has made Fitzpatrick Stadium such a special home for Hearts.

WHAT'S AT STAKE

The 2026 USL League One Playoffs presented by Terminix will be played on a fixed bracket with no re-seeding after each round. The top 8 teams from the regular season will advance to the playoffs.

The Hearts are looking to build on their 2025 season, in which they finished 7th. Top 4 would insure a home playoff match at Fitzpatrick Stadium.
